Brian Boukalik – Executive Vice President and Chief Human Resources Officer

Brian Boukalik was named Tenneco's executive vice president and chief human resources officer in October 2022. He leads Tenneco's effort to create a culture that attracts and motivates our amazing team members across the globe. In his role, he is responsible for the company's global Human Resources function, which includes leadership and organizational development, compensation and benefits, inclusion and diversity, and talent acquisition.

A member of Tenneco's executive leadership team, Boukalik works with senior management to ensure the company's HR priorities are aligned with and in support of the business strategies. He also oversees the company's environmental, health and safety functions globally.

Boukalik most recently served as Tenneco's vice president of enterprise HR operations. He originally joined the company in 2016 and previously led the HR function for Ride Performance and Aftermarket (2016-2018), as well as the Clean Air and Powertrain groups (2018-2020). Prior to joining Tenneco, he began his career at Eaton spending 17 years serving in HR roles of increasing responsibility.

Boukalik holds a bachelor's degree in industrial and labor relations from Cornell University and an MBA from Indiana Wesleyan University.
